1. A storehouse, commonly an arsenal or armoury, or repository of provisions.
If it should appear fit to bestow shipping in those harbours, it shall be very needful that there be a magazine of all necessary provisions and munitions. Raleigh's Essays.
Plain heroic magnitude of mind;
Their armories and magazines contemns. Milton's Agonist.
Some o'er the public magazines preface,
And some are sent new forage to provide. Dryden's Virg.
Useful arms in magazines we place,
All rang'd in order, and disposed with grace. Pope.
His head was so well stored a magazine, that nothing could be proposed which he was not master of. Locke.
2. Of late this word has signified a miscellaneous pamphlet, from a periodical miscellany named the Gentleman's Magazine, by Edward Cave.
MAGE. n. f. [magus, Latin.] A magician. Spenser.
MAGGOT. n. f. [magrods, Welsh; millepeda, Latin; mađu, Saxon.]
 1. A small grub, which turns into a fly.
Out of the sides and back of the common caterpillar we have seen creep out small maggots. Ray on Creation.
From the fore although the insect flies,
It leaves a brood of maggots in disguise. Garth's Dispens.
 2. Whimsy; caprice; odd fancy.
Taffata phrases, silken terms precise,
Three-pil'd hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical, these summer flies,
Have blown me full of maggot ostentation:
I do forswear them.
Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd
In russet yeas, and honest kerly noes. Shakespeare.
To reconcile our late dissenters,
Our brethren though by other venters,
Unite them and their different maggots,
As long and short sticks are in faggots. Hudibras, p. iii.
She prick'd his maggot, and touch'd him in the tender point; then he broke out into a violent passion. Arbutnot.
MAGGOTTINESS. n. f. [from maggoty.] The state of abounding with maggots.
MAGGOTTY. adv. [from maggot.]
 1. Full of maggots.
 2. Capricious; whimsical.
To pretend to work out a neat scheme of thoughts with a maggoty unfetter'd head, is as ridiculous as to think to write fira in a jumbling coach. Norris's Miscel.
MAGICAL. n. f. [from magick.] Acting, or performed by secret and invisible powers, either of nature, or the agency of spirits.
I'll humbly signify what, in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effected. Shakespeare.
They beheld unveil'd the magical shield of your Ariosto, which dazzled the beholders with too much brightness; they can no longer hold up their arms. Dryden.
By the use of a looking-glass, and certain attire made of cambric, upon her head, she attained to an evil art and magical force in the motion of her eyes. Tatler, N^o. 110.
MAGICALLY. adv. [from magical.] According to the rites of magick.
In the time of Valens, divers curious men, by the falling of a ring magically prepared, judg'd that one Theodorus should succeed in the empire. Camden.
MAGICK. n. f. [magia, Latin.]
 1. The art of putting in action the power of spirits: it was supposed that both good and bad spirits were subject to magick; yet magick was in general held unlawful; forcery; enchantment.
She once being loofe,
The noble ruin of her magick, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing. Shakespeare. Ant. and Cleopatra.
What charm, what magick, can over-rule the force of all these motives. Rogers.
 2. The secret operations of natural powers.
The writers of natural magick do attribute much to the virtues that come from the parts of living creatures, as if they did infuse some immaterial virtue into the part fevered. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
MAGICK. adj. Acting or doing by powers superior to the known power of nature; incantating; necromantic.
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vap'rous drop, profound;
I'll catch it ere it come to ground:
And that distill'd by magick flights
Shall raise such artificial frights,
As by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his confusion. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
And the brute earth would lend her nerves, and shake
Till all thy magick structures rear'd so high,
Were shatter'd into heaps. Milton.
Like castles built by magick art in air,
That vanish at approach, such thoughts appear. Granville.

MAG

- MAGICIAN. n. f. [magicus, Latin.] One skilled in magick; an enchanter; a necromancer.
What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds. Shakespeare. Rich. III.
An old magician, that did keep
Th' Hesperian fruit, and made the dragon sleep;
Her potent charms do troubled souls relieve,
And, where she lifts, makes calmest souls to grieve. Waller.
There are millions of truths that a man is not concerned to know; as, whether Roger Bacon was a mathematician, or a magician. Locke.
- MAGISTERIAL. adj. [from magister, Latin.]
 1. Such as suits a master.
Such a frame of government is paternal, not magisterial. King Charles.
He bids him attend as if he had the rod over him; and uses a magisterial authority while he instructs him. Dryden.
 2. Lofty; arrogant; proud; insolent; despotic.
We are not magisterial in opinions, nor, dictator like, obtrude our notions on any man. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
Pretences go a great way with men that take fair words, and magisterial looks, for current payment. L'Estrange.
Those men are but trapp'd who are called to govern, being invested with authority, but bereaved of power; is nothing else but to mock and betray them into a splendid and magisterial way of being ridiculous. South's Sermon.
 3. Chemically prepared, after the manner of a magistry.
Of corals are chiefly prepared the powder ground upon a marble, and the magisterial salt, to good purpose in some fevers: the tincture is no more than a solution of the magisterial salt. Grew's Museum.

MAGISTERIALLY. n. f. [from magisterial.] Arrogantly; with an air of authority.
A downright advice may be mistaken, as if it were spoken magisterially. Bacon's Advice to Villiers.
Over their pots and pipes, claiming and engrossing all these wholly to themselves; magisterially censuring the wisdom of all antiquity, scoffing at all piety, and new modelling the world. South's Sermon.

MAGISTERIALNESS. n. f. [from magisterial.] Haughtiness; airs of a master.
Peremptoriness is of two sorts; the one a magisterialness in matters of opinion, the other a positiveness in relating matters of fact: in the one we impose upon mens understandings, in the other on their faith. Government of the Tongue.

MAGISTRY. n. f. [magisterium, Latin.]
Magistry is a term made use of by chemists to signify sometimes a very fine powder, made by solution and precipitation; as of bismuth, lead, &c. and sometimes refines and refinous substances; as those of jalap, scamony, &c. but the most genuine acceptation is to express that preparation of any body, wherein the whole, or most part, is, by the addition of somewhat, changed into a body of quite another kind; as when iron or copper is turned into crystals of Mars or Venus. Quincy.
Paracelsus extracteth the magistry of wine, expounding it unto the extremity of cold; whereby the aqueous parts will freeze, but the spirit be uncongealed in the centre. Brown.
The magistry of vegetables consists but of the more soluble and coloured parts of the plants that afford it. Boyle.

MAGISTRACY. n. f. [magistratus, Latin.] Office or dignity of a magistrate.

Some have disputed even against magistracy itself. Asterbury.
Duelling is not only an usurpation of the divine prerogative, but it is an insult upon magistracy and good government. Clarissa.

MAGISTRALLY. adv. [magistralis, low Latin.] Despotically; authoritatively; magisterially.
What a presumption is this for one, who will not allow liberty to others, to assume to himself such a license to controul so magistrally. Bishop Bramhall against Hobbs.

MAGISTRATE. n. f. [magistratus, Latin.] A man publickly invested with authority; a governor; an executor of the laws.
They chuse their magistrate!
And such a one as he, who puts his shall,
His popular shall, against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.
I treat here of those legal punishments which magistrates inflict upon their disobedient subjects. Decay of Piety.

Too greedy of magnalities, we make but favourable experiments concerning welcome truths. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

MAGNANIMITY. n. f. [magnanimitas, French; magnanimus, Latin.] Greatness of mind; bravery; elevation of soul.
With deadly hue, an armed corse did lye,
In whose dead face he read great magnanimity. Fa. 2^{da} Let

MAG

- Let but the acts of the ancient Jews be but indifferently weighed, from whose magnanimity, in causes of most extreme hazard, those strange and unwonted resolutions have grown, which, for all circumstances, no people under the roof of heaven did ever hitherto match. Hooker, b. v.
They had enough reveng'd, having reduc'd
Their foe to misery beneath their fears,
The rest was magnanimity to remit,
If some convenient ransom was propos'd. Milton's Agonist.
Exploding many things under the name of trifles, is a very false proof either of wisdom or magnanimity, and a great check to virtuous actions with regard to fame. Swift.
- MAGNANIMOUS. adj. [magnanimus, Latin.] Great of mind; elevated in sentiment; brave.
To give a kingdom hath been thought
Greater and nobler done, and to lay down
Far more magnanimous, than to assume. Milton's Par. Reg.
In strength
All mortals I excell'd, and great in hopes,
With youthful courage and magnanimous thoughts
Of birth from heaven foretold, and high exploits. Milton.
Magnanimous industry is a resolved assiduity and care, answerable to any weighty work. Grew's Cofmol.
- MAGNANIMOUSLY. adv. [from magnanimous.] Bravely; with greatness of mind.
A complete and generous education fits a man to perform justly, skillfully, and magnanimously, all the offices of peace and war. Milton on Education.
- MAGNET. n. f. [magnes, Latin.] The loadstone; the stone that attracts iron.
Two magnets, heav'n and earth, allure to bliss,
The larger loadstone that, the nearer this. Dryden.
It may be reasonable to ask, whether obeying the magnet be essential to iron? Locke.
- MAGNETICAL. adj. [from magnet.]
MAGNETICK. adj. [from magnet.]
 1. Relating to the magnet.
Review this whole magnetick scheme. Blackmore.
Water is nineteen times lighter, and by consequence nineteen times rarer, than gold; and gold is so rare as very readily, and without the least opposition, to transmit the magnetick effluvia, and easily to admit quicksilver into its pores, and to let water pass through it. Newton's Opticks.
 2. Having powers correspondent to those of the magnet.
The magnet acts upon iron through all dense bodies not magnetick, nor red hot, without any diminution of its virtue; as through gold, silver, lead, glass, water. Newton's Opt.
 3. Attractive; having the power to draw things distant.
The moon is magnetick of heat, as the sun is of cold and moisture. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
She should all parts to reunion bow;
She, that had all magnetick force alone,
To draw and fasten hundred parts in one. Donne.
They, as they move towards his all-cheering lamp,
Turn swift their various motions, or are turn'd
By his magnetick beam. Milton's Par. Lost, b. iii.

Magnetick is once used by Milton for magnet.
Draw out with credulous desire, and lead
At will the manliest, resolute breast,
As the magnetick hardest iron draws. Milton's Par. Reg.

MAGNETISM. n. f. [from magnet.] Power of the loadstone; power of attraction.
Many other magnetisms, and the like attractions through all the creatures of nature. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. ii.
By the magnetism of interest our affections are irresistibly attracted. Granville's Scap.

MAGNETIZABLE. adj. [from magnetize.] To be extolled or praised.
Unusual.
Number, though wonderful in itself, and sufficiently magnetizable from its demonstrable affection, hath yet received adfections from the multiplying conceits of men. Brown.

The house that is to be builded for the Lord must be exceeding magnetical of fame and glory throughout all countries. Chron. xxii. 5.
Thrones, dominations, principedoms, virtues, powers!
If these magnetick titles yet remain,
Not merely titular. Milton's Par. Lost, b. v.
O parent! these are thy magnetick deeds;
Thy trophies! Milton's Par. Lost, b. x.

MAGNETICENCE. n. f. [magnetificentia, Lat.] Grandeur of appearance; splendour.
This desert soil
Wants not her hidden lustre, gems, and gold,
Nor want we skill or art, from whence to raise Magnetificence. Milton's Par. Lost, b. ii.
Not Babylon,
Nor great Alcairo, such magnetificence
Equall'd in all their glories to inhume
Belus or Serapis, their gods; or feat

MAG

- Their kings, when Egypt with Assyria strove
In wealth and luxury. Milton's Par. Lost, b. i.
One may observe more splendour and magnificence in particular persons houses in Genoa, than in those that belong to the publick. Addison on Italy.
- MAGNIFICENT. adj. [magnificus, Latin.]
 1. Grand in appearance; splendid; pompous.
Man he made, and for him built
Magnificent this world. Milton's Par. Lost, b. ix.
It is suitable to the magnificent harmony of the universe, that the species of creatures should, by gentle degrees, ascend upward from us toward his perfection, as we see they gradually descend from us downwards. Locke.
Immortal glories in my mind revive,
When Rome's exalted beauties I descry,
Magnificent in piles of ruin lie. Addison.
 2. Fond of splendour; setting greatness to shew.
If he were magnificent, he spent much with an aspiring intent: if he spared, he heaped much with an aspiring intent. Sidney, b. ii.

MAGNIFICENTLY. adv. [from magnificent.] Pompously; splendidly.
Beauty a monarch is,
Which kingly power magnificently proves,
By crouds of slaves and peopled empire's loves. Dryden.
We can never conceive too highly of God; so neither too magnificently of nature, his handy-work. Grew's Cofmol.

 2. To exalt; to elevate; to raise in estimation.
Greater now in thy return,
Than from the giant-angels: thee that day
Thy thunders magnify'd, but to create
Is greater than created to destroy. Milt. Par. Lost, b. vii.
 3. To raise in pride or pretension.
He shall exalt and magnify himself above every god. Dan.
If ye will magnify yourselves against me, know now that God hath overthrown me. Jeb xix. 5.
He shall magnify himself in his heart. Dan. viii. 25.
 4. To encrease the bulk of any object to the eye.
How these red globules would appear, if glasses could be found that could magnify them a thousand times more, is uncertain. Locke.
By true reflection I would see my face?
Why brings the fool a magnifying glass?
The greatest magnifying glasses in the world are a man's eyes, when they look upon his own person. Pope.
As things seem large which we through mists descry,
Dulness is ever apt to magnify. Pope's Essay on Criticism.
 5. A cant word for to have effect.
My governers assured my father I had wanted for nothing; that I was almost eaten up with the green-sickness; but this magnified but little with my father. Spectator, N^o. 432.

MAGNITUDE. n. f. [magnitudo, Latin.]
 1. Greatness; grandeur.
With plain heroic magnitude of mind,
And celestial vigour arm'd,
Their armories and magazines contemns. Milt. Agonist.
 2. Comparative bulk.
This tree hath no extraordinary magnitudes touching the trunk or stem; it is hard to find any one bigger than the rest. Raleigh's Hist. of the World.
Never repose so much upon any man's single counsel, fidelity, and discretion, in managing affairs of the first magnitude, that is, matters of religion and justice, as to create in yourself, or others, a diffidence of your own judgment. K. Charles.
When I behold this goodly frame, this world,
Of heav'n and earth confisting; and compute
Their magnitudes; this earth a spot, a grain,
An atom, with the firmament compar'd. Milt. Par. Lost.
Convince the world that you're devout and true;
Whatever be your birth, you're sure to be
A peer of the first magnitude to me. Dryden's Juv.
Conceive these particles of bodies to be so disposed amongst themselves, that the intervals of empty spaces between them may be equal in magnitude to them all; and that these particles may be compos'd of other particles much smaller, which have as much empty space between them as equals all the magnitudes of these smaller particles. Newton's Opticks.

MAGPIE.
